The Ruins at Virginia Water consist of a number of Corinthian columns which were brought from Tripoli by Sir Frederick Ponsonby in 1825, and were erected on the south bank of the lake by request of George IV. Wyatville is responsible for the arrangement of these classical fragments, they being so set out as to suggest an ancient and half demolished temple.

Dear Miss Mason
I am having a lovely time down here - went to Virginia Water yester day and sat by falls Hoping you have better luck and more work with
